The "World Watch List for Domestic Animal Diversity" is a global early warning system designed to help prevent the erosion of livestock genetic diversity. Seven species are covered - ass, buffalo, cattle, goat, horse, pig and sheep. Breeds at risk are defined as critical or endangered based on the number of breeding females. Lists are further divided into six geographical regions, each with an introduction providing details of the area's geography, demography and agro-ecology. Recommendations and opportunities for action to prevent extinction are also listed.
