Tsuki no Kage Shadow of the Moon Asher Lee

Is the desire for freedom the very thing that has ensnared us? What's more frightening than risking everything on one person? Enter a world where every day is like cotton candy; fuzzy, warm, and sweet. Where intoxicating music fills the air, lifting you high above the ground. Where there is magic in the streets, fueling the hearts of those who will accept it. Haru, Yuki, Natsu, and Hana are shiny, pure-hearted, childhood friends. It only took the presence of one feral, drum-playing kid to disrupt the easy moving cogs of their lives. Throw in fate's definition of humor, and they have the perfect paradox of the joys and sorrows they must bear before they reach the melancholy splendor of discovering what it means to truly come alive.
